CIVIL NO. 14-00082 DKW-RLP

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S RULE 60(b)(4) MOTION

ORDER DENYING PLAINTIFF'S RULE 60(b)(4) MOTION

On July 31, 2014, the Court dismissed Mather's complaint and denied her request for leave to amend. Now, over three months after the entry of that order and judgment, Mather moves the Court to vacate the order as void under Fed. R. Civ. P. 60(b)(4). Because Mather has provided no basis to do so, the motion is denied.

Rule 60(b) of the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure provides an "exception to finality," that "allows a party to seek relief from a final judgment . . . under a limited set of circumstances.” Gonzalez v. Crosby, 545 U.S. 524, 528–29 (2005). Specifically, Rule 60(b)(4)—the provision under which Mather brings the instant motion—authorizes the Court to relieve a party from a final judgment if “the judgment is void.”

“A void judgment is one so affected by a fundamental infirmity that the infirmity may be raised even after the judgment becomes final.” United Student Aid Funds, Inc. v. Espinosa, 559 U.S. 260, 270 (2010). The list of such qualifying infirmities is “exceedingly short.” Id. “A final judgment is ‘void’ for purposes of Rule 60(b)(4) only if the court that considered it lacked jurisdiction, either as to the subject matter of the dispute or over the parties to be bound, or acted in a manner inconsistent with due process of law.” United States v. Berke, 170 F.3d 882, 883 (9th Cir. 1999); accord Espinosa, 559 U.S. at 271. “A judgment is not void, for example, simply because it is or may have been erroneous. Similarly, a motion under Rule 60(b)(4) is not a substitute for a timely appeal.” Espinosa, 559 U.S. at 270 (internal quotation marks and citations omitted). “Motions for relief from judgment pursuant to Federal Rule of Civil Procedure 60(b) are addressed to the sound discretion of the district court.” Barber v. Hawaii, 42 F.3d 1185, 1198 (9th Cir. 1994).

Mather demonstrates no reason for the Court to grant her post-judgment relief under Rule 60(b) or any other rule. She argues that this Court misinterpreted the law related to the application of the Rooker-Feldman doctrine to Mather's proposed amended complaint, which she was denied leave to file. An argument over the application of law could have been an argument on appeal of the Court's order and judgment, but it is not a basis to void a judgment under Rule 60(b)(4). Espinosa, 559 U.S. at 270.

Even if Mather's arguments could qualify as the type necessary to provide a basis for post-judgment relief, the Court is not persuaded. Mather argues that relief is warranted because the Rooker-Feldman doctrine has been abolished. That is simply not the case. Indeed, Mather's complaint is precisely the type of case to which the Supreme Court has held the doctrine applies. In the case cited by Mather, the Supreme Court stated that the Rooker-Feldman doctrine is confined to "cases brought by state-court losers complaining of injuries caused by state-court judgments rendered before the district court proceedings commenced and inviting district court review and rejection of those judgments." Exxon Mobil Corp. v. Saudi Basic Indus. Corp., 544 U.S. 280, 284 (2005). No matter how frequently or vigorously she argues otherwise, this is such a case. Mather's proposed amended complaint consisted of claims that directly challenged the final judgment issued in the state-court proceedings and were therefore barred by the Rooker-Feldman doctrine. Mather could have appealed the Court's order and judgment but apparently chose not to do so.

CONCLUSION

Mather's Rule 60(b)(4) motion is hereby denied.

IT IS SO ORDERED.
